Recruiting and Onboarding Employees Resources for Your Region

How can employers attract the best talent? With a constantly evolving job market, businesses must consider job seekers' needs and hone recruiting and onboarding processes in order to connect with qualified candidates.

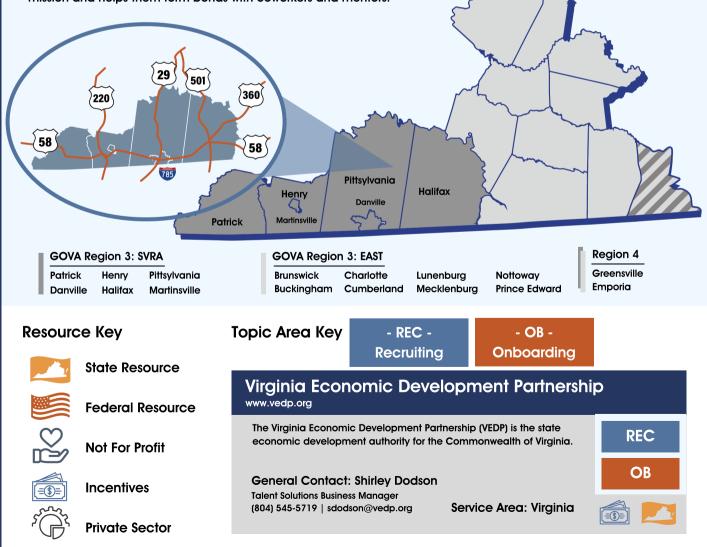

First impressions make a difference. While recruiting, companies should consider the interview process to be the first step in onboarding. Job candidates seek human connection, efficiency and responsiveness throughout the application process as well as a strong and supportive company culture.

Once an employee has been hired, businesses that invest in structured onboarding processes engage and retain new hires with greater success than businesses who don't take onboarding seriously. Successful onboarding clarifies rules and responsibilities, orients employees to an organization's values and mission and helps them form bonds with coworkers and mentors.

Strong onboarding can improve employee retention by 82%. (Brandon Hall Group)

Only 20% of companies proactively onboard new employees at the most strategic level, covering compliance, clarification, culture and connection. (Website: NSCA.org. Original source: Society for Human Resource Management)

Only 12% of employees think their organization does a good job of onboarding. (Gallup)
